

History Goes On

The Online Solution to your Covid-Cancelled Conference woes

The coronavirus outbreak has left us all struggling to adjust to a new reality of personal distancing and self-isolation. The British Commission for Military History has therefore set up the 'History Goes On' platform to allow military historians across the world to continue share and discuss their exciting research, despite conferences being cancelled indefinitely.

From 18:00 on 24th March, our website www.historygoeson.com will be live for you to share your conference papers, and lectures (whether they are old or new). We will upload and host them for you, and publicise them on social media. Visitors to the site will be able to watch them free of charge, and then join the discussion in the site's forum.

How do I get involved?

We would love to hear from you, whether you're a student, academic, or someone with an detailed interest in a particular period. Just email historygoeson2020@gmail.com and one of our team will take it from there. We are interested in all periods facets of military history, from social studies to strategy, gender to economics, politics to archaeology, and everything in between.

For more info, take a look at our website. If you aren't sure where to start with your recording, get in touch, and we can help. You can also join the discussion in our forum, and keep up to date with our latest releases on twitter by following @Mars_Clio, and the #HistoryGoesOn.

Our lives are going to be a bit different for a while, but History Goes On, and no pandemic is going to stop us discussing it!

Stay safe, stay well, support one another, and remember to stay kind.

